Fez, the world's largest labyrinth

Do you want to walk down a medieval street? Then Fez is the right place for you. Fez was the medieval capital of Morocco and the place where Moroccan culture began to prosper. Medieval traditions have remained unchanged here for centuries. In particular, the Medina of Fez, an old section of the city, has kept its architecture and style the way it was 1,200 years ago.

What makes the Medina of Fez more special is the world's largest and most complicated labyrinth. Nearly 9,000 narrow alleys are entangled in one another without any pattern or logic, and sometimes you may reach a dead end. As you wander the alleys in the Medina of Fez, you can see an endless view of markets with roofs, old mosques, palaces, and dyeing factories. Cars are not allowed in these narrow and crooked alleys, so you can easily come across mules or donkeys carrying goods.
